U.S. Tanks Battle East Of Siegfried Line

UNDER 40 MILES FROM COLOGNE

AMERICAN troops are fighting over virtually open country east of the Siegfried Line, less than 40 miles from the big Rhineland cities of Cologne and Dusseldorf, states Reuter. Front-line dispatches last night reported a "definite break-through" of the Line north of Aachen—the U.S. 1st Army's second wedge in the West Wall defences in 24 hours.

American tanks and infantry are stated to be at grips with German troops on territory where there are only tank traps and newly-constructed field defences.

Ubach, about a mile and a half inside Germany south of Geilenkirchen, and, roughly, ten miles north of Aachen, was captured in the American break-through during a four miles' advance.

Aachen in Ruins

AACHEN is a "ghost town." Such was the impression given last night by a German radio commentator, who has just returned to Berlin from a visit.

"There is a ghostly silence," he said. "The normally busy railway station is deserted, the centre of the town is in ruins, and at one road-crossing there is a notice: 'Beware, this crossing is within sight of the enemy.' The American lines are only a few hundred yards away."—(A.P.)

(Reuter, A.P. and P.A.)

Driving through a break in the first heavy crust of defences, the troops fought their way four miles from the point where they jumped off on Monday, to cut the main road leading north from Aachen.

This gives the Americans two major breaches in the line — one north of Aachen, and the other south of Aachen, which is on the main road to Cologne.

In this second major break in the "West Wall" defences, the powerful drive of Hodges' 1st Army infantry captured Palenburg; and, after fighting thoughout the day, they drove the Germans from the old 12th century castle of Rimberg, where they battled within the moated walls.

The break-through threatens Aachen with complete encirclement, and denies the Germans one of the major routes of withdrawal from the ruined city.

To capture the castle fortress of Rimberg, the American infantry had to scale and breach the outer walls under a raking fire. The troops then surged on to the assault with small arms and grenades.

The loss of the castle means that the Germans can no longer command perfect observation of the bridges which the Allied engineers have thrown across the Wurm river. The tree-shrouded terrain had enabled the Germans to make the castle one of the strongest points in this sector of the Siegfried Line.

AIR ONSLAUGHT

In one of the most concentrated air support operations of the campaign, hundreds of 9th Air Force bombers and fighter-bombers on Monday ripped open portions of the Siegfried Line in advance of the American 1st Army in the Aachen area, and bombed and "strafed" German troop concentrations and transport over a wide area along the entire front. After the attacks it was stated that Allied troops were advancing through gaps opened by the bombing.

German ground resistance generally is fairly strong, and includes artillery, mortar and small arms fire, a lot of it from prepared positions, such as pill-boxes and fortifications.

Another report states that fighting is very fierce and bloody, with the Germans firing from foxholes and dug-in emplacements.

The capture of Ubach followed a house-to-house battle. The Americans knocked out 39 pill-boxes and took between 400 and 500 prisoners in breaching the line. Beyond the point of penetration there are other defences, but they are new fortifications.

"We definitely are through the old Siegfried Line," an army officer declared. "We have a second major breach. There are, however, still fortifications and anti-tank defences ahead of us which the Germans have built recently."

The German troops in yesterday's fighting used "radio-controlled baby" beetle tanks."

Two German war reporters described the Siegfried Line battle over Frankfurt radio last night.

One, who had visited the Trier area, said:—"The air-raid sirens at Trier have no rest either by day or night. The town is under American shellfire as well, and you can see the scars left by bombs and shells."

Speaking from Aachen, another said:—"The artillery fire in this sector has risen to a drum-like cannonade. It looks as if the enemy were about to launch his large-scale offensive."

Captain Sertorius, the German News Agency commentator, stated last night that considerable forces of the U.S. 1st Army were attacking north of Aachen. He predicted that General Hodge's army would swing north in a pincer thrust on the Rhineland industrial area coordinated with a new offensive by the British forces from the Dutch corridor.

Other American forces, fighting bitter house-to-house struggles, are battling along the streets of Oberloon, 12 miles south-east of Nijmegen, Reuter said last night. The Americans have all but surrounded Oberloon.

Yesterday was relatively quiet at Nijmegen and Arnhem, and there were no German counter-attacks. The weather has been extremely bad and has hampered ground operations. German attacks on the flanks of the corridor were repulsed. There have, however, been some slight advances north of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal.

Merxem, the northern suburb of Antwerp, where street fighting had raged for several days, was occupied by Canadian troops yesterday after the Germans had withdrawn during the night.

Parachutist Reporter Captured

Jack Smyth, a Reuter's special correspondent and the only newspaperman to drop with the parachutists at Arnhem, is believed to be a prisoner. Smyth was with a transport column which was attacked and cut in two in a wood at Arnhem. He took a parachutist's course and won his wings last year.—(Reuter.)

Dyke Smashed: German Troops Engulfed

R.A.F. Lancasters, in wave after wave, yesterday breached the great dyke near West Kapelle, in Walcheren, and engulfed the German garrison holding the island from behind long-established defensive positions, states the British Air Ministry News Service.

The Allies could not use the great port of Antwerp while the Germans held Walcheren and had big guns there. Now the Germans' position threatens to become impossible.

Cairo Reports Allied Landing at Crete

Cairo reports, quoted yesterday by Reuter and A.P. Correspondents from a broadcast from Algiers, said that powerful Allied forces have been landed on the north-west coast of Crete. Other messages state that British troops have landed on an island between Northern Greece and the Peloponnese.

"Landings were also effected on two other smaller islands," the reports added. "The Navy is supporting the landings, and is supplying food to the local inhabitants."

Reuter says that there is no official confirmation of the Cairo reports.

A T.B. "Black Spot"

Full institutional treatment of tuberculosis must take precedence over all other hospital schemes, said Dr. T. F. O'Higgins, T.D., at a meeting of Meath County Council, which considered the hospitalisation of Meath, on Monday.

The institution should have accommodation for 150 patients and a resident superintendent and house physician. At one time, Dr. O'Higgins added, Meath had the lowest average in tuberculosis, and it was now certainly one of the black spots, and when he considered that the county was one of the wealthiest in the State, the rapid increase in the disease was a disgrace.

The Council appointed a committee to investigate the possibility of a joint scheme and to confer with Louth County Council on the matter of a joint sanatorium for the two counties.

Belfast Presbytery yesterday passed a resolution urging the Northern Government, Belfast Corporation, and the Commissions for Tuberculosis to give further attention to the serious extent of T.B. in the city and to provide more sanatoria.

Yacht Missing

A yacht which left Skerries on Monday at 1.30 p.m., and was sighted by the keepers of the Baily Lighthouse at 7.30 p.m. the same day, has not been heard of since.

On board the vessel—a 22-footer—were Mr. Jack McConnell and Mr. Kenneth Martin, both of Dublin.

The yacht, painted white and Bermudian rigged, is numbered 10.

President Roosevelt yesterday received the senior members of the Chinese delegation to the International Security Conference.

DAIL QUERY ON "WAR CRIMINALS"

MR. DE VALERA, as Minister for External Affairs, told Mr. M. E. Dockrell (F.G.), at question time in the Dail yesterday, that he was aware that representations had been made by the Allied Governments to the Governments of neutral countries concerning the harbouring of "war criminals" after the war.

With regard to a further question—as to whether similar representations had been made to the Government of this country, and, if so, what was the nature of the reply—Mr. de Valera asked Mr. Dockrell if he would be good enough to wait for a week or two, when he hoped to be in a position to give the information sought.

PARTITION

When asked by Captain P. Giles (F.G.) if he was aware of the urgency of the question of partition, and if he would now take steps to make a final approach to the British Government so that, in the event of their failing to give satisfaction to Eire's claims in the matter, a case could be made and placed before the coming European Peace Conference, Mr. DE VALERA said: "The need and urgency of restoring the unity of Ireland is ever before the Government. No opportunity for bringing home to those concerned the injustice of the present position and its bearing on the relations between Ireland and Britain has been, or will be, neglected."

CONTROL ON SHIPS

In the British House of Commons, yesterday, Mr. Dingle Foot, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Economic Warfare, told Mr. Horabin (L., Cornwall, N.) who asked what was being done to prevent the escape from Europe of Nazi leaders and other German nationals on out-bound Spanish ships, that for the last two years the Government had administered a system of passenger and crew control on all neutral ships sailing to or from European ports.

Feis Ceoil Not Banned

A denial of a report that the Feis Ceoil is banned by the constitution of the Gaelic League has been made by the League. It is learned that the Feis Ceoil so far has not been registered in accordance with the rules under which feiseanna are held; but this does not mean that members of the Gaelic League are in any way prohibited from competing at the Feis.

P-PLANES FOR OCEAN ROUTES AFTER THE WAR

POST-WAR pilotless commercial planes, flying to and from the United States faster than sound, and at an altitude of 40,000 feet (7½ miles) to ensure complete comfort, is one of the important suggestions put forward by Sir Henry Tizard, President of Magdalen College, Oxford, and formerly head of aircraft research at the British Ministry of Aircraft Production.

Addressing a crowded private meeting of M.P.s, peers, professors and technicians in the House of Commons, who belong to the Parliamentary and Scientific Committee, Sir Henry gave one glimpse of the near future that caused much discussion afterwards. He said that flights across the Atlantic before long should be possible in automatically controlled machines, which would not need any navigator on board.

"It would be like going to America in a flying bomb!" he stated.

Sir Henry added that there could never be a regular or economic service across the Atlantic below the 40,000-feet level, because, at lower ranges, storms and other atmospheric conditions would be liable to interfere. Much research on altitude questions was necessary.

A deputation of Conservative M.P.s later went to see Mr. Churchill, to discuss with him the future of British civil aviation. The Prime Minister promised to consider the points made.

Russians Rapidly Nearing Belgrade

THE Red Army is advancing on Belgrade at points on a 60-mile front only forty miles from the city.

Moscow's official report last night described a new drive across the Danubian valley from Rumania, in which already the important towns of Petroygradin, forty miles north of the capital, and Bela Crkva, forty-five miles east-north-east, have been occupied.

The Russian communiqué also said that troops of the Leningrad front, as the result of a skilful landing operation, captured the Island of Dagoe, at the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

Bulgarian troops are now fighting under Red Army Command. The War Minister, M. Petro Staynov, said that, at the request of the Russians, Bulgarian forces had passed under the command of General Tolbukhin, commanding the Soviet 3rd Ukrainian Army.

Taoiseach's Ennis Speech Causes Disquiet

ON the adjournment of the Dail last night—until October 18th—Dr. T. F. O'Higgins (F.G.) said he was raising a question on the circumstances associated with a meeting held by the Taoiseach at Ennis on Sunday last. Since it would be inadmissible, at the adjournment stage, to refer to any matter of Government policy, he did not intend at this point to discuss in detail the rather sensational, startling and disturbing statement made by the Taoiseach in so far as that statement affects the Army.

It was a statement to the effect that in future the age limit for the Army would be 30 years of age, with the exception of senior officers.

"I think," said Dr. O'HIGGINS, "that such a statement, unexplained, must have a disquieting and disturbing effect on non-commissioned officers, soldiers and junior officers in or about 30 years of age. We had a great pension scheme for the Army, which was intended to attract the young men of this country to adopt the Army as a career. It was laid down that the main terms of this pension scheme was fourteen years' service. The men could not join the Army until they were eighteen years.

"Under the new scheme announced at Ennis they will be turned out at 30, so that no pension is possible except for a very senior officer.

"These are matters of policy which I do not wish to pursue. Rather, I wish to express regret that a major happening of this kind was not discussed in Parliament or at the Defence Conference.

"All the circumstances attending last Sunday's meeting showed very scant respect for Parliament, also a distinct discourtesy to the Defence Council, and a public insult to the leader of the main Opposition party.

"On Sunday we had the leader of the Opposition invited to attend and speak at Ennis.

"When he got there he was informed that the Taoiseach, as head of Fianna Fail, and one of the deputies of that constituency, would be the only person allowed to speak.

"He was brought there under false pretences."

Mr. W. NORTON (Lab.) said he could hardly believe that the Taoiseach deliberately contemplated an army which would accept no persons over 30 years of age. The Taoiseach's speech had caused grave disquietude among men over 30 years of age, and he hoped the Taoiseach would give more details of the Government's proposals.

Mr. OSCAR TRAYNOR, Minister for Defence, said he was surprised at the manner in which Deputy O'Higgins tried to raise this matter. He was more surprised at the lines which he took. It must be obvious to everybody that the Taoiseach was speaking of a post-war period, and was making it clear to the members of the Local Defence Forces that there would be a place in the post-war Army for the force.

"It surprises me to hear Deputy O'Higgins talking about the position of officers in the Army because, from experience, he must surely know that these men have entered into a contract with the State, and that the State will honour that contract."

Dr. O'HIGGINS said he believed the Taoiseach meant what he said.

Mr. TRAYNOR stated that the responsibility of inviting people to speak at the Ennis meeting, and of speaking from the platform, rested with the local committee. When asked if there were to be speakers other than the Taoiseach he said, and the Army authorities agreed with him, that it was undesirable to have a series of speeches at an Army parade, especially in view of the fact that there was a dinner being given by the local committee at which they were to be invited to attend and speak. If Deputy Mulcahy had anything of importance to add to the statement made by the Taoiseach he would have been offered a platform there in the hotel from which he could have made any statement which he desired to make. He was sorry that Deputy Mulcahy went away and did not come to the particular function and speak.

TAOISEACH'S REPLY

Mr. DE VALERA said he found it very difficult to understand what the whole thing was about. He was invited to distribute prizes at a parade, and he was very happy to do so. It was intimated that if he wished to address the parade it would be well if he did so.

"I had two objects in making the speech. The first was to tell the members of the Defence Force and the people of the country as a whole that, in regard to this matter of defence, and in the matter of the post-war Army policy, the question of defence was not forgotten, and that the question of our national defence after the emergency is as important, if not more important, than a lot of other things we are planning and thinking about.

"I wanted," said Mr. de Valera, "to assure the people of the country, and in particular the Defence Force, that the question of national defence and the Army necessary to defend our liberty in future was not forgotten. With regard to want of courtesy towards the Defence Conference and the House, surely it is not to be suggested that I can never open my mouth or speak in public on any subject without coming to the Dail and saying that I was going to make a speech?"

He wanted to make it quite clear, he said, that if they were considering anything which would mean legislation, that would have to be brought before the Dail and the Oireachtas, and would have to be discussed before any decision would be made even by the Government.

The TAOISEACH added that there would have to be a territorial force, more or less as at present. "I do not believe," he said, "that we are out of the wood yet. There is a very dangerous world position that may arise, not merely before the war ends, but after the war ends, and it would be a tremendous mistake, in my opinion, if, having built up our Defence Forces with such care and trouble, we were to think 'everything is grand, everything is fine,' and go on as if the emergency did not exist."

"STAND FAST"

Mr. DE VALERA said he wanted to ask the Defence Forces to "stand fast" until those responsible for the safety of the State say to them: "The emergency now is past, and we are bringing in a scheme which we will try to dovetail into the present position, so that we can pass by gentle transition from our present situation into the future." He added that he was surprised that the matter had been raised.

Minister Asked Why Bacon is Scarce

When Alderman A. BYRNE (Ind.) asked the Minister for Agriculture, in the Dail yesterday, to state the bacon quota to retailers, and the cause of the present scarcity of bacon; also whether consumers might expect an increased supply at an early date,

Dr. RYAN said that since February last the Pigs and Bacon Commission had been operating a scheme to secure an equitable distribution of available supplies through wholesalers and retailers. Each month the Commission fixed a quota for distributors, which was based on their average monthly supplies in the year ended March 31st, 1941. Shortage of feeding stuffs had led to a decline in the number of pigs available for curing, but feeding was now less scarce, and there were signs of a revival in the pig industry. The number of pigs sent to factories for curing during the past two months had been appreciably greater than that of the corresponding period last year.

General R. MULCAHY (F.G.) asked the Minister if he knew any reason why there should be smaller supplies of bacon in the city this month than last month. Dr. RYAN replied that the quota had to take into account the amount of bacon supplied to the curers, and the trend of pig production.

Eire—"Sleeping Partner"

The current issue of The Bell comments editorially on "a very interesting proposal," which, it says, is now going the rounds of certain London political circles.

"In sum," says the editorial, "it is being canvassed that a united Note from Britain and the members of the British Commonwealth might reasonably suggest to Eire that the Board of Directors feels embarrassed by the presence of a sleeping partner, and would she mind resigning; in other words, that Eire be asked to consider herself no longer a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations. . . ."

DUBLIN'S FEAR OF "RAW DEAL" ON WAYLEAVES

WHEN the Dail discussed yesterday the section of the Transport Bill which deals with the cessation of wayleaves payable by the dissolved Transport Company to the Dublin and Dun Laoghaire Councils the LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN said that the bargain made in 1925 for the payment of wayleaves should stand.

They wanted to protest, he said, against the assessing of compensation on a dominating quantity. He felt that the citizens were getting a raw deal.

The Committee Stage of the bill was passed before the House rose and the Dail adjourned until October 18th.

Mr. LEMASS said that in 1925 when the D.U.T.C. sought, by legislation, the right to run buses, the Corporation opposed the measure. To secure cessation of the opposition the company agreed to pay an annual sum for wayleaves fixed at the amount payable that year. The Special Committee, when considering the bill, had their doubts about the justice of this arrangement, as was clear from the wording of the bill. In the present bill the determination of the capital sum to be paid to the Corporation in compensation was left to arbitration. Nobody should contend that the Transport Company should continue to pay in perpetuity charges which arose out of the operation of the tramways centuries after the tramways ceased.

The section was carried, on a division, by 54 votes to 23.

TRIBUNAL TO GO

Mr. LEMASS, speaking to an amendment by Mr. J. Hughes (F.G.) on the section which provides for the setting up of a Transport Advisory Committee, said that the Railway Tribunal was too costly. The cost intimidated people who had small cases for re-adjustment from bringing them before the Tribunal. The bill proposed to abolish the Tribunal, transfer its judicial functions to the High Courts and its administrative functions to the Minister, who, in the discharge of these functions, would have the assistance of the Advisory Committee, which would, if necessary, conduct public inquiries into the matters concerning which it had been consulted.

Mr. HUGHES suggested that the two ordinary members of the Advisory Committee nominated by the Minister for Agriculture should be chosen from a panel of nine names, three of each to be put forward by the Irish Agricultural Organisation Society, the Irish Sugar Beet Growers' Association and the Royal Dublin Society. He also suggested the selection of two other names from a panel of nine names to be put forward by the Chambers of Commerce of Dublin, Cork and Limerick.

There were several other amendments in this section. One from Deputies P. S. Doyle, F. Lynch and P. McGilligan asked for the inclusion on the Board of a member who would have qualifying experience of railway administration. Another sought to bar any person holding permanent office under the State.

The amendments were withdrawn, and the section was agreed to.

Mr. LEMASS told Mr. M. E. Dockrell (F.G.) that the Minister had to be satisfied that an alternative service would be provided before he made an order abandoning railway lines. The new company would be required to provide adequate transport facilities covering not merely areas previously serviced, but large areas which were never served. A system of maximum fares prescribing the cost of classified goods per mile would operate. There would be a mileage charge for the transportation of passengers to operate in all areas.

Mr. LEMASS assured General Mulcahy that a private lorry-owner might carry his goods under any circumstances in his own lorry. A practice had grown up of a number of traders combining on paper to form a company to purchase a lorry to carry their goods. The bill intended to ensure that the goods carried would not be deemed to be the property of the lorry owner unless all the owners had a common property in the goods.

Speaking to a Government amendment on the first schedule relating to an agreement between the Dublin Corporation, the Grand Canal Company and the new company in respect of the maintenance and operation of the Victoria Bridge, Mr. LEMASS said he thought the parties concerned should be able to come to agreement, but, if not, the matter could be submitted to arbitration. It was generally agreed that there should be a better bridge, but it would be unfair to saddle the new company with the whole cost.

The amendment was passed.

Mr. LEMASS moved an amendment to Section 112, providing that where the Minister by order required any canal undertaking to execute any works he may, after consultation with the Minister for Local Government and Public Health, require the local authority in the area to pay to the canal undertaker a contribution towards the expense of the works.

The amendment was agreed to. The Committee stage was agreed, and the Report stage was fixed for October 18th.

Vocational Commission Report Criticised

In the course of an analysis of the Vocational Commission report at the opening lecture of the season of the Dublin District Council of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union at the Broadway Soda Fountain, Dublin, last night, Mr. Cathal O'Shannon, Secretary of the Irish Trade Union Congress, observed that the Commission had drawn attention to the references in the Saorstat Constitution, and in the present Constitution, to the recognition of functional or vocational groups, and had stressed the principles in the Papal Encyclical, Quadragesimo Anno.

The Commission's report claimed, continued Mr. O'Shannon, that it was quite practicable to have sufficient development of vocational organisations to implement the terms of its report, but he considered that it would take a considerable length of time before that stage of development could be brought about.

Mr. O'Shannon said that the report was a valuable and important document, worthy of study, but he was not yet convinced that the complicated system visualised by the Commission was workable.

Effort to Settle Dockyard Dispute

A dispute between two unions, on a matter in which the employers had no responsibility, was referred to in a letter from the Minister for Industry and Commerce read at last night's meeting of the Dublin Trades Council.

The letter dealt with the dispute of sixteen weeks at the Liffey Dockyard, Ltd., due to an objection by the Society of Boilermakers and Iron and Steel Shipbuilders to a certain member of the Engineering and Industrial Union being employed as a boilermaker in the dockyard.

The MINISTER regarded it as a reflection on the trade union movement that such a dispute should lead to a stoppage in an industry essential to the country's welfare in the present emergency. He suggested that the Trades Council or the Irish T.U.C. should take steps to terminate the deadlock.

It was decided that the Council request the Minister to arrange a conference between representatives of the company, the boilermakers, the Engineering Union and the Executive Committee of the Council.

Mr. T. R. S. Gibson, Board of Works, who has been appointed Planning Officer for Co. Londonderry.

Cottages' Bill Heavy Burden On Ratepayers

WHEN the debate was resumed in the Dail yesterday on the Labourers Bill, sponsored by the Labour Party, which proposes a new scheme for the vesting of labourers' cottages in the tenants, Mr. JAMES COBURN (F.G.) said that a serious situation would face local authorities after the emergency, when it would not be possible to let new cottages at less than 4s. or 5s. a week. He could not see the tenant of a new cottage paying that rent while his neighbour had an old cottage at 9d. a week.

Mr. MacENTEE, Minister for Local Government, said that the bill did not deal with trifles, concerning, as it did, 62,000 houses, representing an original capital investment of over £11,000,000. If the bill were to become law, the result would be, within a brief period, to strip local authorities of all the assets which arose out of the original investment of £11,000,000 and leave them a considerable burden of liabilities.

The 1936 Act assured the tenant who became a tenant-purchaser an immediate rent reduction of 25 per cent. in a weekly rent of 1s. 2d. In time he would become the owner of his cottage in fee-simple, and, surely, it could not be contended that such a scheme was unfair to the tenant.

Replying to charges that people were not interested in the scheme, the MINISTER said that the fact that they had so many applications refuted that. By March 31st last no less than 9,453 applications to purchase had been received.

The rents payable by tenants prior to the Act of 1936 was £243,000. The annuities payable by tenants, if all cottages were sold under the Act, would be £182,680. If effect were given to the proposed bill the cost to local authorities would be £437,000, instead of £307,000.

The debate was adjourned.

Dungarvan Murder Charge

William Donoghue (23), tinsmith, stated to be a native of Clogheen, Co. Tipperary, and John Donovan (29), labourer, of Cathal Brugha place, Dungarvan, Co. Waterford, were charged at a Special Court in Dungarvan yesterday with the murder of Private Charles Daly (20), a member of the Defence Forces and a native of Clara, Offaly, at Dungarvan on August 30th.

Dr. D. R. Counihan, State Solicitor, outlining the case, said that Private Daly had been drinking with Corporal Stewart and Private Byrne in a public house and an argument arose as to their hurling and boxing capabilities. Private Daly and Corporal Stewart went to a lane, where they engaged in friendly sparring. The accused men came on the scene, and were told by the soldiers that it was not a public exhibition. The accused men drifted off, but returned. The soldiers left the lane to go back to the publichouse.

Evidence would be given, stated Dr. Counihan, that the accused men armed themselves with pieces of wood, and attempted to obtain cigarettes from the soldiers, who shoved them away, and it was alleged that one of the accused men struck a heavy blow. Corporal Stewart then saw Private Daly on the ground. He also received blows, and had identified his assailants since.

Good Response to Red Cross Appeal

Although the Irish Red Cross Society only announced on Monday last that vacancies exist for doctors, nurses and other personnel in their hospital unit, which is to be sent to France, roughly 100 applications arrived by post at their Dublin headquarters yesterday They came from all parts of the country. So far, it is not possible to say what medical supplies will be brought to France by the unit.

To date, the Society has received from the American Red Cross eleven consignments of medical supplies, weighing approximately 255 tons, and valued at $230,774. This is roughly one-third the value of supplies which the American Red Cross has allocated to the Irish Society.

Some of the more important items in consignments received to date include:—Diphtheria sera, 45,500,000; sulphanilamide group tablets, 2,500,000; insulin, 4½ tons; chloramine T. tablets, 2,280,000; vitamin capsules, 500,000; 15 operating tables, and 23 disinfectors. Supplies arriving at Dublin have been given free accommodation by the Dublin Port and Docks Board, pending their distribution; prompt clearance has been afforded by the Revenue Commissioners, while storage throughout the country has been given free by local authorities.

Escaped Internee Recaptured

Patrick Adams (30), of Abercorn street, North Belfast, one of 21 internees who escaped from Londonderry Jail on March 20th, 1943, has been recaptured at Goraghwood, Co. Armagh. Adams was recognised by police, who were on Customs duty on a Belfast-bound train. He made no attempt to resist arrest.

Dr. Maude Royden Marries.—Dr. Maude Royden, the preacher, was married at Sevenoaks, Kent, on Monday to the Rev. George William Hudson Shaw, formerly Rector of St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate, London. Dr. Royden is 68. Mr. Shaw is over 80.

RISING OF WARSAW ENDS AFTER 63 DAYS' FIGHTING

WARSAW'S tragic struggle ended yesterday. After 63 days, in which its citizens fought overwhelming odds, all of the capital on the Vistula's west bank is under German control.

Polish units which refused, according to Polish reports from Moscow, to accept the decision of General Bor (the newly-appointed C.-in-C.) to end resistance are fighting their way over the Vistula to the big Praga suburb (about one-third of Warsaw) held by the Red Army.

Cabling from Moscow, Reuter's special correspondent says that thousands of Warsaw insurgents have escaped over the river, and have joined up with the army of Lieut.-General Zygmund Berling, commanding the Polish Division on the Soviet front.

In Polish circles in London it is believed that General Bor has escaped.

The Warsaw rising began on August 1st. The sound of Russian guns, it was stated, could then be heard in the city, and the population believed that their liberation, after five years of captivity, was imminent. The Germans, however, rushed up four additional divisions and fresh armour, and drove the Russians back to the north-east and east, and it was only after six weeks of bitter battles that the German counter-attacks were worn down and Praga captured on September 14th.

GREAT EFFORTS

Great efforts had been made, first by the Western Allies and later by all the Allies, to provide the beleaguered garrison with arms, munitions and supplies from the air, but Polish spokesmen always stated that the quantities were insufficient.

The Polish Telegraph Agency states that in the first six weeks of the fighting to the middle of September 200,000 people were killed, wounded or missing, and a further 100,000 were imprisoned — the casualties thus totalling almost a third of Warsaw's pre-war population. Half the buildings in the city have been destroyed beyond repair, and a further 35 per cent. are uninhabitable without repairs.

The Polish Prime Minister, M. Mikalajczyk, made the following statement last night:—

"Warsaw fell on October 2nd at 8 p.m. The cessation of military operations took place after all supplies had been exhausted, when the garrison and people were completely starved out, had been deprived of water for many weeks, and lacked medical supplies and dressings for the thousands of wounded lying in underground hide-outs without aid, after vain attempts to fight their way out, after the successive fall of the old town, the suburbs of Mokotow and Zoliborz, and, finally, after all hopes of relief from outside had vanished, because attempts made by the Soviet forces and the Polish formations co-operating with them to force a crossing of the Vistula in the Warsaw area had proved futile.

"The garrison and population of the capital have fulfilled their soldierly duty beyond the limits of human endurance and gallantry.

"Warsaw's fight throughout August and September of 1944 is the only instance in the history of this war in which a great city has conducted such a long and isolated defence with her own means, without heavy equipment, without any considerable help from outside, against a superior enemy, having at his disposal the whole destructive might of modern warfare.

"The defence of Warsaw will remain for ever a testimony to the invincible moral strength of the Polish nation and its unyielding will to independent life."

Moscow radio last night praised the gallantry and heroism of the Polish forces, but again described the insurrection as "ill-timed."

Police Found Arms Dump In Residence

WHEN the trial of Charles Kerins (26), Caherina, Tralee, charged with the murder of Detective Sergeant Denis O'Brien, at Ballyboden, Rathfarnham, on September 9th, 1942, was resumed at the Special Criminal Court in Collins Barracks, Dublin, yesterday, evidence was given of a raid carried out on a house in Upper Rathmines road, and of Kerin's arrest there.

In the room where Kerins was sleeping at the time of his arrest were found a Thompson machine-gun, a Colt automatic, a .25 automatic, bomb springs, hand-grenades, detonators, in addition to over 1,000 rounds of ammunition.

Mr. R. J. McLoughlin, S.C., with Mr. G. D. Murnaghan, S.C., and Mr. S. Hooper (instructed by Mr. P. Humphries, Chief State Solicitor's Office) appeared for the State. Kerins was not professionally represented.

A detective gave evidence of visiting the house between 4 and 5 a.m. on June 16th. He said he entered through a basement door and went to a top room. One of the two beds in the room was occupied by Kerins. In a cupboard at the foot of the bed occupied by Kerins he found a piece of sacking containing a Thompson gun with a loaded magazine and 504 rounds of loose ammunition. Within easy reach of the bed he found a Colt automatic pistol in a shoulder holster, fully loaded, having a bullet in the breach and the safety catch off, ready for immediate action. There were also spare magazines and a ship's chronometer. In a drawer, with some personal property of the occupier's son, who also occupied the room, he found a .25 automatic.

Another detective gave evidence of searching the cupboard referred to by the previous witness. He found 282 rounds of rifle ammunition in a canvas bag, also boxes which contained 200 rounds of Colt automatic pistol ammunition and 95 rounds of 9 mm. automatic ammunition. He also found a parcel containing a brown sock, in which there were 203 rounds of mixed ammunition; a blue sock, in which there were 85 rounds; 45 revolver ammunition, 310 bomb springs and 12 boxes of Colt .45 ammunition. Each box contained 50 rounds. In a Gladstone bag there was a Thompson gun drum and two holsters, 18 hand grenades, two rifle bolts, two rifle magazines, four Thompson gun-cleaning rods, a pair of leggings (Army type) and a parcel of old papers and publicity.

Another Garda gave evidence of finding in Kerins's room another automatic pistol with grenade parts, and three files containing I.R.A. intelligence and other reports. There were also some maps and plans.

Another Garda gave evidence of finding 17 hand grenades in Kerins's room and a typewriter.

CLERICAL GARB

A detective said that in a chest of drawers near Kerins's bed he found a clerical collar and stock similar to those worn by Christian Brothers. In the hall he found a black gabardine clerical coat and hat.

A witness said that when she took employment as cook-general at the house in 1942 there were two students there, who became known to her as Brother McSweeney and Mr. Kearney. Brother McSweeney used to wear Christian Brothers' clothes. She left in February, 1943, and had not seen either of these men since. She identified photographs of the two men, and said that the man in the dock was the man she knew as Kearney.

A BIG-RACE POINTER FOR LIFE-SAVER

By Our Irish Racing Correspondent.

THE field for the Irish Cambridgeshire at the Curragh on Saturday may fall short of earlier anticipations, and the defection of the Irish Derby winner, Slide On, one of the early fancies for the race, will be a source of disappointment to many.

R. Fetherstonhaugh, who trains Slide On, will saddle a very strongly-fancied candidate in Mrs. Pleydell-Bouverie's Life-Saver. This gelding is a half-brother to the Phœnix Plate winner, Lady's View, and his chief claim to consideration rests upon his comfortably-gained win in the Turf Club Handicap, over a mile, at the Curragh last month. In this race he finished in front of Arts Ball, The Abbot of Hainault, Grand Inquisitor, Priorate, and Taffytrap, all of whom are engaged in Saturday's race.

Taffytrap is trained by R. More O'Ferrall, who is also responsible for Ekyad, Wykehamist, and New Pyjamas, and, according to present intentions, he will send all four to the post. The question of jockeys has not yet been decided upon, but it would be no surprise should Ekyad and Wykehamist be the only two to represent the Kildangan establishment when final plans have been decided upon; but this is mere conjecture on my part.

C. A. Rogers states that he will run his recent purchase, Free Trade, who will be ridden by G. Wells. Mill Boy may run for Miss Paget, but this is not yet definite. Cardy, from the same establishment, is a definite non-runner.

Last year's winner, Astrologer, will again run, and will be ridden by his customary pilot, Jackie Power, and there will be no more stronger-fancied candidate in the field. Carlist runs for M. A. Byrne, and, though the trip may be a trifle beyond the best of this good-looking, but hitherto unlucky, colt, I expect to see him run his usual game race. It is possible that B. Duffy will ride Carlist, but here again definite arrangements have not yet been made.

Big Events On The Dublin Tracks

GREYHOUND racing enthusiasts are being well catered for presently. The Puppy Derby started at Harold's Cross Park last night, and to-night the draw for the McAlinden Cup will be made at Shelbourne Park.

Everything points to this year's Puppy Derby being most successful. There is a representative entry from the provinces, while the majority of the others have been showing good form on the home tracks. Although it is rather early to attempt to name the ultimate winner, a strong fancy would be Astra, a full sister to Mad Tanist (Tanist—Mad Darkie). Like her relative, she combines alacrity from the trap with unfailable pace, and on her performances this season she must have a great chance.

The McAlinden Cup, always a most popular event, has this year been endowed with additional stake-money. The value to the winner, previously £150, has been increased to £250; the second receives £100 and the third £40, while there are, of course, the usual allowances for dogs beaten in the later rounds.

Most of the crack performers are entered, and fast times are likely to be the order. Among the top-notchers is Robeen Printer, who compensated her owner, Mr. A. J. Probert, for her defeat in the Oaks at Harold's Cross by an easy success in the Laurels final at Cork on Saturday night.

Fitness and Team-Work Won Cup

BY a rather strange freak of fortune, it took Shamrock Rovers ten seasons to win the City Cup. In that period they won the F.A.I. Cup twice, the League of Ireland twice and the Shield thrice; but not until last Sunday did they succeed in their long-drawn-out effort to add the City Cup to their list of triumphs. That they did so in such a decisive manner—winning all six matches, scoring 25 goals and conceding only 9—was surely a highly meritorious achievement.

Admittedly, the opposition was extremely weak; but, even had it been as strong as that which they had to fight against last Sunday—when they beat Dundalk in the closing minutes by the odd goal of nine—they probably would have overcome it just as readily.

The salient feature of the Rovers' unbroken sequence of successes has been their team work, virility, methodical movement, deftness of foot and physical fitness — everything, in fact, that goes to the making of a first-rate team.

If Rovers have one failing it is the too close play of the forwards inside the penalty area. Bob Fulham certainly has made an excellent job of it in the coaching of the side, but to complete it he will have to eliminate that one shortcoming in the attack, brought on, no doubt, by fear and trembling lest a miss from a favourable position should bring forth from the crowd a storm of disapproval and disappointment. Otherwise there is no flaw in this Rovers' team worth mentioning.

Whether they will be able to maintain in the Shield and League that brilliance that has been the one and only feature of the season to date remains to be seen. The point has been stressed that in the Shield they have but two matches at Milltown. But ground advantage is not the wonderful asset that some believe it to be. The really good team can play quite as well away from as at home. That has been proved time out of number.

It will not surprise any student of form should Rovers win the Shield as easily as they won the City Cup, and, as for the League, unless there is a very marked improvement in the standard of the football so far served up by the other teams that competition also should be well within the grasp of the Milltown club.

ENGLAND XI TO MEET SCOTLAND

England have selected the following team against Scotland for the charity soccer international at Wembley Stadium on October 14:—

Swift (Manchester City); Scott (Arsenal), Hardwick (Middlesbro'); Soo (Stoke), B. Joy (Arsenal), Mercer (Everton) (captain); Matthews (Stoke, Carter (Sunderland), Lawton (Everton), Goulden (West Ham) and Smith (Brentford).

Irish News in Brief

Employer's Goods Stolen — Cecil McClelland (20), Ormond road, Rathmines, was sent to prison for one month yesterday by District Justice Mangan, in Dublin District Court, for stealing a clock valued at £1 10s., an electric razor valued at £3, and a watch valued at £2, the property of John Maher, Thomas street, by whom he was employed.

Garda Superintendent Promoted — Superintendent J. J. Kelleher, who has been attached to the headquarters of the Civic Guard at Kilmainham, has been promoted Chief Superintendent. He has been a member of the force since its foundation.

Low Educational Standard—Although they do not admit pupils to Sligo Technical School unless they have spent one year in the sixth standard of the National School, Mr. D. A. Mulcahy, chief executive officer of the Vocational Education Committee, describes the standard of education as "terribly low."

An Ancient Coin — A silver coin dated 1575 has been found at Castlegore, Castlederg, Co. Tyrone, on the site of an ancient castle. On one side of the coin is a shield and on the other the face of a woman, but the latter is indistinct, as also are the letters around the coin.

Acting Circuit Judge — Mr. M. J. Connolly, S.C., has been appointed to act as a Judge of the Circuit Court from October 1st to December 31st next.

Surveyor Retained — With the approval of the Ministry of Local Government, Belfast administrators have re-engaged temporarily Mr. R. B. Donald, City Surveyor, who was due to retire at the end of September under the Corporation's grading scheme.

Stole Four Bicycles—Convicted of stealing four bicycles in Killarney over a period of four years, Thomas O'Sullivan, caretaker of Killarney Racecourse, was, at Killarney, yesterday, sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour by District Justice H. L. Conner.

MISSIONARY SALE

A successful sale of work was held yesterday in the C.M.S. Hall, Molesworth street, Dublin, in aid of the South American Missionary Society (Irish Auxiliary). The Rev. J. B. Neligan (Chairman of the Committee) opened the sale with prayer.

An enjoyable feature of the sale was the song recital by Miss Madge Dougheed, who played her own piano accompaniments.

Leinster Rugby Affairs

MR. J. RAMSEY (Monkstown) was elected president in succession to Mr. D. J. O'Connor (Bective Rangers) at a meeting of the Leinster Branch, I.R.F.U., at Jury's Hotel last night.

"Jim" Ramsey has been associated prominently with Rugby for the last quarter of a century, and for almost the same period has been connected with the Monkstown Club, the presidency of which he has held on the last few years.

The hon. sec., Mr. E. C. G. Mulhern, reported a successful season. Financially the season was even more successful, as was demonstrated in the analysis of the balance sheet by the hon. treas., Mr. T. A. Brindley. An increase of £486 14/10 in gate receipts was reported; the total of £3,303 8/2 constituted a record, the previous best being in the '40-'41 season, when, with three Senior Cup replays, the receipts were £3,158 15/-.

Relating to referees, Mr. R. W. Jeffares, jun., hon. sec. of the Referees' Association, spoke of the necessity for club secretaries to inform the Branch if matches were cancelled, thereby obviating needless journeys and inconvenience to referees. He also stressed the fact that more attention should be paid to markings on pitches, and that linesmen should be provided by the particular clubs involved.

Mr. L. B. McMahon put forward the suggestion that there were too many representative matches, and that clubs were disorganised by the constant requirement of their players for representative teams. The case of Old Belvedere was instanced, and on their behalf Mr. G. J. Morgan said that he was in complete agreement with Mr. McMahon's suggestion, and also pointed out that a longer interval between the cessation of summer sports and the start of Rugby would be much appreciated by all-round sportsmen.

The following officers were elected:—President, Mr. J. Ramsey (Monkstown); hon. sec., Mr. E. C. G. Mulhern (re-elected); hon. treas., Mr. T. A. Brindley (re-elected).

Executive Committee — D. J. O'Connor, L. B. McMahon, F. A. Moran, Dr. Harry Michael, E. J. Lightfoot, Captain Ramsey, G. J. Morgan, D. C. Fitzpatrick, V. E. Kirwan, the Rev. E. R. S. Farrell, G. P. S. Hogan, the Rev. R. Watson, W. Ritchie, E. J. McCarthy, E. J. Daly, the Rev. M. Walsh, C. D. Sutton, R. W. Jeffares, jun.

DRAW FOR SEVEN-A-SIDE

Following is the "draw" for the seven-a-side competition at Lansdowne road on Saturday week:—2.30, Old Belvedere v. University College; 2.45, Old Wesley v. Lansdowne; 3.0, Blackrock College v. St. Mary's College; 3.15, Dublin University v. Monkstown; 3.30, Clontarf v. Palmerston; 3.45, Bective Rangers v. Wanderers; 4.0, winner of 2.30 match v. winner of 2.45 match; 4.15, winner of 3.0 match v. winner of 3.15 match. Semi-finals, 4.30 and 4.45. Final about 5.30.

DETECTIVES CHARGED

Detective Officer Martin Murphy and Detective Officer Felix McKeown, Dublin Castle, were charged in the Dublin District Court yesterday with having, on April 18th last, "corruptly accepted a gift of £80 from James Small Kearney Clontarf road, as an inducement for forbearing to do an act in relation to their duties as members of the Detective Force in regard to a prosecution for breaches of the Emergency Powers Act."

Inspector Wyer said that, when he arrested the two officers at Dublin Castle yesterday morning Detective Murphy said: "I emphatically deny the charge," and Detective McKeown replied: "I emphatically deny having received any money or any other gift from that man." When brought to the Bridewell and charged they both again denied the charge.

Mr. L. J. Lysaght (Chief State Solicitor's Office) said that he did not propose to offer any further evidence at that stage, and he asked for a convenient date to be fixed to dispose of the case.

Mr. P. F. O'Reilly, solicitor, who appeared for the accused officers, said that the sooner the case was disposed of the better for his clients. All they said was that they were completely innocent, and they wanted this asserted openly and as soon as possible.

District Justice Mangan remanded the accused officers until October 10th, and fixed bail at £100 each and £100 independent surety.

KERRY-CARLOW AGAIN

BY PATO

CROKE PARK has another big football game on Sunday next, when the All-Ireland semi-finalists, Kerry and Carlow, meet. Shrewd critics deemed Carlow unlucky when these teams met a month ago. The Leinster midfield pair—Kelly and Morris—had the better of a long argument for possession with Kennedy and Brosnan. Carlow are a neat, fast-moving side. They have been close to championship standard for five years, and believe they have the foot of Kerry.

This match, in aid of their county grounds at Tralee, will probably find Kerry at full championship strength in their own interests. Should Carlow win, as prophets forecast, their game with Roscommon (Croke Park) a week later will attract a crowd of championship dimensions.

The Bruton Ring Memorial hurling have brought Dublin and Cork to yet another final. Had Kilkenny survived at Enniscorthy a Cork-Kilkenny final, first since 1939, would be a Cork-Dublin gate at Croke Park. At Enniscorthy, Kilkenny led for the bulk of the hour, and looked like coming through double a Cork-Dublin gate at Croke Park. when Dublin staged a last grand rally to punch in two goals and pull the game out of the fire.

Galway hurlers again played right well through the field against Cork (home). The Western backs erred in fouling close to goal, giving the Cork captain, Sean Condon, openings to shoot a record lot of scores from frees—3 goals and 5 points. Galway are definitely in the picture with a big chance in the 1945 championship; their forwards still need steadiness close to goal.

Leinster's new football League opened well, Meath, Longford and Kildare taking valuable points. Dublin are bringing J. Lowry, Fitzsimmons and B. McEvoy into their Brother Rice Memorial team against South at Dundalk. All have figured prominently in recent club games. Sean O'Neill, of Kickhams, a speedy winger, is given a place on the right. This reads a useful side, and may reach the final stages.

DIOCESE OF MEATH

The Bishop of Meath has appointed the Rev. James McCann, B.D., Rector of St. Mary's, Drogheda, to the Prebendal Stall of Tipper in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, in succession to the Rev. Canon Stuart, B.D., who has resigned on superannuation.

About 30 tons of straw, belonging to Messrs. Craigie Bros., Merville Dairy, Finglas, were destroyed by fire last night.

Arms Dump Found

A detective said that when he arrived at the scene of the shooting on September 9th the sergeant's body was lying at the gateway. He was handed a .38 revolver, with three rounds discharged, two not discharged, and an empty chamber. There were bloodstains on the gun.

A Sergeant gave evidence of finding six empty Thompson gun cartridge cases in a field between O'Brien's avenue and Bolton Hall lodge.

A Guard stated that he found in a field between O'Brien's house and the main road a .45 Colt automatic pistol. Embedded in an elm tree he found a bullet of the .45 calibre machine-gun type.

BULLET MARKS

A ballistics expert attached to the Garda Siochana Technical Bureau said that there were nine bullet marks on the pier of one of the gates leading up to the house. There was one round fired from a .45 Colt automatic pistol, which was found, and it had seven undischarged rounds. On the magazine of the pistol he found a finger print. Witness went on to explain that Sergeant O'Brien's car had been fired at as it came down the avenue. There were two points of fire from different Thompson guns, one of them being fired from across the road at the gateway. It was from this gun that the bullets, which struck the gate pier, were fired. One of the bullets was found in an elm tree over the gateway. On June 19th, 1944, he examined 21 items found in a house where Kerins was arrested. They included three automatic pistols, empty Mills grenade cases, two old R.I.C. pattern grenades, a number of parts for grenades, detonators and spare parts for Thompson guns, and 54 rounds of .450 calibre ammunition for a Thompson gun. Eleven of the fifteen rounds found at the scene of the shooting were of the same manufacture as those found at 50 Upper Rathmines road, and had the same buckle varnish on the caps. A Thompson gun was handed over to him for comparison with the exhibits in the O'Brien case, but the results were negative. The gun was not used in the murder of Sergeant O'Brien.

FINGER-PRINTS

In reply to Mr. Murnaghan, a Garda finger print expert said that on September 21st, 1941, he took the finger prints of a man named Liam Burke. On September 9th, 1942, he examined the bicycle found at Ballyboden, and beneath the handlebars he found three finger prints. One of the prints on the left handlebar was made by the right ring finger of Kerins, whose prints were taken after his arrest. A second print found on the bicycle, which was equally as fresh as that made by Kerins, was, he was satisfied, made by Liam Burke.

A Garda said that in the top back bedroom of a boarding-house in September, 1942, he found a haversack, a copy book containing entries such as: "Circular to units asking for list of friends in Britain," and "South Dublin—Arms lost in raid"; a number of sheets of used copy paper, and a manual on the use of the Thompson sub-machine-gun.

A sergeant said that when he searched the top back bedroom of a house on September 16th, 1942, he found five overcoats. In the pocket of one of these overcoats he found documents, which had the following entries under the names of towns:—Killarney—Six rifles, four .45s, two long Webleys, one Lewis gun, one Thompson gun, 100 rounds .303 ammunition, 500 rounds .45, 10lb. potassium chlorate; Listowel—12 rifles, one Lewis gun, two Thompson guns, three .45s, six grenades, one Winchester, one shot gun, five rounds .45, 21lb. potassium chlorate; Killorglin—One Thompson gun, 135 rounds .303 ammunition, a Colt Webley, three rifles, six rounds .45; Ardfert—One Thompson gun, four rifles, 15 rounds .303, six rounds .45, one Webley; Castlegregory—Ten rifles, three .45s, 500 rounds of .303 ammunition, a Thompson gun, gelignite grenades and a German gun; Cahirciveen—Fourteen rifles, a Lewis gun, one Thompson gun, five revolvers, a Peter the Painter, six rounds of small stuff, 180 rounds for German gun, three magazines for same, 40 grenades, one shotgun, three automatic shotguns, and an entry about money; Killorglin—Two short arms, six rounds of .45 d. x b., 30lbs. gelignite; Ardfert—One Colt, P.L., two Webleys, explosives, clocks, etc.; Castlegregory—German machine gun, one S.A., gelignite, d. x b., 46 rifles; Cahir—Seven best rifles, stuff for Gallagher, gelignite, mag. for German machine-gun, three automatic shotguns; Killarney—One Lewis gun, 1 s. t.

A RAID

The proprietress of a boarding-house said that after the shooting of Sergeant O'Brien detectives raided her house. She gave evidence before the Military Tribunal in connection with a charge of murder against a man named Michael Quill, who was staying in her house in August, 1942. A few other men also stayed in the same room. She said that a man named Charlie Hanly paid for the other men sometimes. Kerins was the man she knew as Charlie Hanly. She knew Quill as Michael Barrett. Kerins left the house a month before the shooting, but after he left he called back and visited the top room a few times. There was nobody staying in that particular room on September 8th or 9th, 1942, and the room was not occupied for a week before the shooting.

Michael Quill was then brought into Court, and witness identified him as the man she knew as Michael Barrett.

Continuing her evidence, witness said that in the summer of 1942 there was a man named "Liam" staying at her house. She did not know his full name.

Mr. McLaughlin then handed the witness a photograph, which he said was that of Liam Burke, and the witness said that she had known him as "Sean." She could not remember when he first came to her house. He was there a week or two. During the month of August the other men stopping at her house appeared to know each other. A man named Rory Maguire was the first of these to arrive.

A witness said that in January, 1942, he went to reside at the house, and some time later a number of men came to the house and he got to know them. The first one to come was a man he knew as "Mick Barrett," whom he now knew to be Michael Quill. During the month of August, witness was on holidays, and, when he came back, Quill had left the house, but used to visit there. Another of the men in the house (Kerins) he knew as "Charlie Hanly." The men in the house did not appear to do any work. Some of them, including Kerins, had bicycles, and he used to see from three to five bicycles in the kitchen. A few nights before the shooting, Quill and Kerins visited two men staying in the house, named "Christy" and "Liam." From the time Sergeant O'Brien was shot to the time the house was raided by the Gardai on September 16th, there were two men staying in the house—Christy and a man he did not know.

The hearing was adjourned until to-day.

Anti-V.D. Campaign Urged

An anti-V.D propaganda campaign is urged by Dr. F. J. Grogan, M.B., Offaly County Medical Officer of Health, in his annual report.

"In view of the grave increase in the incidence of venereal disease, and the prospects of a further heavy increase on the return home of many emigrants to England, where the disease is widespread," states Dr. Grogan, "I am of the opinion that consideration should be given immediately to the question of an anti-V.D. propaganda campaign through the medium of the Press, leaflets, and posters warning the public of the dangers of contracting the disease, and of the necessity of consulting their doctor immediately symptoms appear. There is an appalling ignorance among Irish people of the dangers of this dread disease. In my reply to queries from the Local Government Department on the question of venereal disease, I suggested a propaganda campaign on above-mentioned lines."

The number of Wasserman and other tests reported on in the county during the year ended March 31st last was 57.

Fifth Army Draws Near Bologna

FIGHTING their way against stubborn resistance up the main Florence-Bologna road, troops of General Clark's Fifth Army have captured the cross-roads town of Monghidoro, eighteen miles south of Bologna, states Reuter's Special Correspondent at Advanced Allied H.Q.

About six miles west of Monghidoro other American troops advanced two miles across rugged mountain country to Casoni Diromagna, a mile or so nearer Bologna than Monghidoro. East of Monghidoro Fifth Army men, striking towards Imola—whose capture would threaten the rear of Marshal Kesselring's troops along the Adriatic—still are held 12½ miles from the town.

ANOTHER WINTER?

A few months ago there was a general hope, if not an actual belief, that the war in Europe was about to come to an end. Ever since hostilities began more than five years ago people of all nations, under the stress of war conditions, have been indulging themselves in the easy luxury of what has been described as wishful thinking; and there can be no doubt at all that the whole world, heartily sick of war, is more than anxious for the restoration of peace. The events of recent weeks, however, have brought the wishful thinkers face to face with grim reality. The war is not over; and there seems to be every reason to anticipate a sixth winter campaign. After their spectacular successes in France and Belgium, the Anglo-American Allies have reached the German borders; but, with the exception of minor penetrations, the tempo of their advance has come to a halt. In the north, having failed to turn the Siegfried Line by the use of parachute and airborne troops in the Arnhem area, the British are reported to have consolidated their position in the region of Nijmegen, having gained firm control of the all-important bridge across the River Waal. General Dempsey took a big risk when he thrust his finger-like salient from Eindhoven towards the north, exposing his lightly-protected flanks to the threat of constant attacks by the Germans, after the fashion of Marshal von Brauchitsch in 1940, when he flung a long salient across Northern France from Sedan to Abbeville and Boulogne. It seems that General Dempsey's salient is supplied by a single road. Nevertheless, he has managed to hold it up to the present, largely, no doubt, because the Allies in the west enjoy undisputed supremacy in the air. The withdrawal of the airborne troops from Arnhem undoubtedly was a reverse for British arms; but all the military experts agree that the risk was worth the taking. Success would have meant the opening of a wide gateway for the invasion of Northern Germany, and even failure has meant a substantial advantage for the Allied attack. Farther south the Americans are making frontal attacks on the "West Wall" at three points. In the neighbourhood of Aachen they claim to have advanced for about two miles along a five-mile front; according to German reports they actually have advanced nine miles along a front more than ten miles in width. On this sector of the front the Germans evidently have established a formidable system of defence in depth, with the result that every inch of ground is being defended with obstinate tenacity. Still farther south the Americans are within five miles of Metz, one of the strongest fortresses along the German frontier. In the far south they are meeting with increasingly stiff opposition in the Belfort region. General Patton's troops are making progress, but they have not yet managed to break through the famous Gap.

In the East, a similar condition of affairs has been created. Three or four months ago the Russians were actually on the threshold of East Prussia; but, for all practical purposes, German soil remains intact. The Red Army has experienced some heavy fighting in the Baltic States. Estonia has been virtually cleared of Germans; but the Soviets have not yet been able to capture the vital port of Riga, which is being subjected to fierce attack. A few days ago a Russian spokesman declared that Warsaw, which also has been threatened for several months, could not possibly be reduced until it should have been completely encircled. Incidentally, the insurrection of the Warsaw population, which began in August, has come to an end. In the South, the Russian advance continues, although at a greatly reduced pace. Soviet troops, having occupied Rumania, have entered Hungarian territory in Transylvania. They also have crossed the Danube at some points into Yugo-Slavia, where Marshal Tito has been waging guerrilla warfare against the Germans for some considerable time. There is little or no news of the activities of the British units that were landed about a week ago by air and from the sea in Albania; but it seems to be fairly certain that the general policy of the Allies is to gain a firm grip upon the Balkan Peninsula before the onset of winter and, if possible, to establish military contact between the troops fighting in the Balkans and those under General Alexander's command in Italy. Here again, Allied progress, if sure, has been slow. Marshal Kesselring evidently has substantial reserves at his disposal, and the so-called Gothic Line is proving to be a formidable obstacle. Rimini, on the Adriatic coast, is in Allied hands; but, although there has been fierce fighting towards the north, the Germans have been putting up exceptionally stiff resistance. The prospect of yet another winter of war must be faced—by neutrals as well as by belligerents. On the Russian front, the rainy season is about to begin, if, indeed, it has not begun already; and it must be remembered that on the Polish sector the whole area, which includes the Masurian Lakes, becomes a regular swamp at this time of the year. Of course, since the war began, the Soviet armies have surprised the world by the way in which they have been able to surmount climatic conditions; but armoured warfare—the movement of tanks and the like—will be out of the question during the rainy period; and the Germans, without a doubt, are banking on this fact. Looked at from the standpoint of those countless millions of human beings who are yearning for peace, the immediate prospect is not particularly bright. Of course, this war has been so full of surprises that anything might happen. Hitherto attempts at prophecy have proved almost invariably to be wrong, and one man's guess is just as good or just as bad as another's. Prudent people, however, will steel themselves against the rigours of another winter of world slaughter. They may be spared the ordeal; but, as matters stand at present, the odds would seem to be against them.

School Meals

The children have returned to school, and still there is no prospect of an improvement in the standard of school meals. Last year, it will be recalled, the widespread demand for a better meal to be served to children at school inspired the Corporation to a munificent gesture. Instead of milk and a bun, the children were supplied daily with milk and a cheese sandwich. Now milk is the most important of all foods for growing children, and nobody can argue that it ought not to be included in their menu; and bread and cheese sandwiches are filling and, up to a point, nourishing. Yet one scarcely can pretend that such picnic fare is a satisfactory substitute for a complete hot meal. Many pupils in our schools are unable to get home in the dinner hour; far more of them arrive home only to find the table bare, or furnished with nothing more appetising than bread and tea. Children have, or ought to have, good, healthy appetites. A proper meal of meat and vegetables, with a glass of milk in addition, is the only thing that really will fill their need. Certain members of the Corporation have urged these fairly obvious facts for some time, but neither local nor national authorities appear to be persuaded. We are aware that prelates of the Catholic Church have expressed an objection to any type of community feeding, on the grounds that it breaks up family life. For ourselves, we are unable to subscribe to that view; but it is possible that the milk and sandwich represent an effort to compromise between nourishment and doctrine. Whatever the reason, the existing school meal is, at best, a half-hearted affair. Can it not be improved before the winter?

PROPOSED G.S.R. CADET SYSTEM

AT question time in the Dail yesterday, Ald. P. S. DOYLE (F.G.) asked the Minister for Industry and Commerce if he was aware that, without prior consultation with the trade unions concerned, the G.S.R. Company are establishing a cadet system in their service from which all future appointments to executive positions are to be made, and that membership is to be confined to staff who are not over 25 years of age, and who have not less than four years' service, whether they entered the service through open competitive examination or not; and whether he would consider the withdrawal of this scheme, which would be liable to create grievous discontent among the staff, particularly at this juncture, when harmony was essential.

Mr. LEMASS said that he understood that the result of past circumstances had been to leave unqualified, if not actually to render unfit, most of the employees who might have shown promise in the direction of handling the affairs of management. It was to remedy this that the company proposed to bring into operation at the earliest moment the new scheme, under which the company intends to select by competition those of its employees of any grade, not more than 25 years of age, who show the greatest promise of aptitude and capacity for management, and to give such employees special facilities for qualifying in a four years' course of training, with, however, no guarantee of executive appointment. He had been told that this would not preclude the consideration of employees over 25 years of age for executive appointments, nor of persons outside the company's service.

PENSIONS INSURANCE.—Mr. ERSKINE CHILDERS, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Local Government, told Mr. William Norton (Lab.) that there were no reciprocal arrangements with Great Britain for widows' and orphans' pensions insurance. When a man insured under the Widows and Orphans Pensions Act left the country to take up insurable employment in Great Britain, he would become insured under the Widows and Orphans Pensions Acts in force in Great Britain, without any continuity from his Irish insurance. He remained an insured person under the Irish Act for twelve months after the date of the last Irish stamp. If he should die within two years of that date, before he would be fully qualified under the British scheme, and after the termination of his insurance under the Irish scheme, his widow would not be entitled to a contributory pension under either scheme. Proposals were being considered under which the insurance position of such persons could be safeguarded.

PARISH COUNCILS — Mr. MacENTEE, replying to Mr. F. Bourke (F.G.), said that Part VIII of the Local Government Act, 1941, enabled a County Council to give approval to parish councils or any local council established for furthering the general social and economic interests of the people in any locality. The county council might assist by providing village halls for parish council meetings, lectures and general recreation. The county council could avail themselves of the help of and delegate functions to the parish council. The attention of the county councils was drawn to the provisions of the Act, and the county councils of five counties had approved of parish councils, but, except in Limerick, the number approved had been limited. The growth and development of the parish councils depended largely on local initiative.

MERRION SQUARE — Mr. MacENTEE told Mr. James Larkin (Lab.) that he had had no representations regarding the advisability of having the open space at Merrion square, Dublin, made available for the use and enjoyment of the public or as a children's playground; he had received the report of the inquiry into Dublin Corporation housing, and it would be published in due course.

THRESHING CHARGES — Dr. RYAN told Mr. Donnellan (Farmers) that under the Emergency Powers (No. 337) Order, 1944, the charge to be made for threshing in any particular locality was restricted to an amount of not more than 12½ per cent. above the current charge in the locality in 1941-1942. No evidence had been received that this limit was being exceeded. Under Emergency Powers (Portable Threshing Mills) Order, 1944, threshing mill owners who work for hire were obliged to have their mills licensed and to ensure that the machines worked efficiently. Tillage inspectors investigated complaints of indifferent threshing.

Mr. DONNELLAN asked the Minister if he was aware that some millowners were charging as high as £2 per hour; and, if he would check the charges. Dr. RYAN replied:—"It is extremely difficult to get information on these charges, unless the farmer comes forward with definite proof." The Minister added that he would consider establishing a scale.

COAL IMPORTS—The MINISTER FOR SUPPLIES told Mr. W. Furlong (F.F.) that only comparatively small quantities of coal were provided from Bristol Channel ports and relatively few shipments were involved. It was frequently necessary to send ships which had discharged cargoes of Welsh coal to Scottish or English ports. He understood that most of the ships engaged in the coal trade would lose considerable time if bad weather should be encountered in making the voyage to and from Cork. "As long as it remains necessary to secure the quickest possible turn-round of the ships," he said, "I do not consider that I would be wise in arranging for vessels to discharge at Cork."

TEACHING OF IRISH.—Mr. E. O'NEILL (F.G.) asked the Minister for Education if he had received from the Vocational Committee of Co. Cork a protest respecting the instructions conveyed to them from his Department, compelling them to regard as ineligible for the posts of Irish teachers and teachers of Irish and continuation subjects, University graduates who had done their Arts and H.Dip.-in-Ed. degrees through Irish; and if he would state why he compelled a local committee to regard a certificate like "Teastas Timthire Gaedhilge" issued by his Department as being more important than a degree of the National University of Ireland.

Mr. DERRIG said that much difficulty had been experienced by Vocational Education Committees in obtaining suitably qualified teachers of Irish, teachers, who, in addition to the necessary knowledge of the language, were able, by organising activities, to foster the language movement, and to maintain the interest and progress of the students. Following representations made in 1939 and 1940 by the Irish Technical Education Association, the Department decided to organise a special course for the training of teachers of Irish. This course was held in 1941, and a certificate called the Teastas Timthire Gaedhilge was granted to teachers who completed the course satisfactorily. These specially trained teachers were very successful in organising and maintaining Irish classes in the districts in which they were appointed, and it was therefore decided to restrict future appointments as whole-time teachers of Irish to persons who had obtained similar training and qualification. There was no intention to evaluate the importance of a university degree nor to institute a comparison between such a degree and any other qualification; it happened that duties were to be assigned to teachers of Irish employed by Vocational Education Committees, the training for which would both in the ordinary way be covered by courses hitherto available, and it was decided that the Teastas Timthire Gaedhilge was the most suitable qualification for the special duties referred to. There was nothing to prevent university graduates from obtaining the necessary qualifications.

THE TAXATION OF MOTORISTS

By HAROLD C. BROWN

THE system of taxation in force in Great Britain and in this country has caused the interest of the great majority of motorists, and with it the technical genius of most designers, to be concentrated in small cars. The smaller the engine of a car, the smaller the licence duty and the smaller the petrol consumption, and petrol was taxed at 8d., 9d., and 10d. a gallon before the war. The British small car was a first class job with a high efficiency engine that ran best on a superior quality of petrol.

A different class of motor, it is claimed, is needed for the export market, and it is impossible to produce a satisfactory car for export unless there is a considerable use at home of the same model. There is not space to go into the reasons for that, but it is so. If the registration fee for all cars was the same, there would be an increased domestic use of larger cars, and what the Exchequer lost by having a small, common registration fee it could regain by slightly advancing the tax on fuel.

Users of commercial vehicles with a heavy petrol consumption are opposed to such a system of taxation.

Even if a common registration fee fails to find acceptance, it is likely that a change will be made by grading the tax according to the engine's cubic capacity instead of by a "horse-power" determined by an arbitrary formula which multiplies the square of the diameter of the cylinder (in inches) by the number of cylinders and divides the result by 2.5. This formula has led to the development of small bore, long stroke engines, instead of square engines which would run more smoothly.

Until the British Government has given some indication of its taxation proposals, the designing of really new cars is going to be delayed.

In this country, car taxation is divorced from questions of export markets; it is merely a source of revenue. There is strong agitation for a change in the system, with, perhaps, rather more unanimity than in England. If instead of paying £1 for each unit of "horse-power," motorists paid a flat rate of £3 or £4 per year, more cars would be used, and bigger cars would be used, with the result that considerably more petrol would be used, and, even with no alteration in the present duty on motor fuel, the Minister for Finance would gain in revenue from the petrol tax all that he lost in registration fees.

It is not the object of these articles to advocate any particular cause, or change. The ordinary motorist, however, should be interested in the fact that reforms in motor taxation are being strongly pressed on both sides of the Irish Sea, and that the design of car that he may be driving in 1947 or 1948 will be influenced by the success or failure of the Motor Trade's efforts to effect alterations.

ART FUND CONCERT

The high light of the second of the concerts in aid of the Mainie Jellett Scholarship Fund at the Irish Exhibition of Living Art, in the National College of Art, Dublin, last night, was the playing by Bay Jellett and Charles Lynch of the Violin and Piano Sonata in G by the Belgian composer, Lekeu.

The strings of the Dublin Orchestral Players, under the direction of Brian Boydell, played in lively fashion two symphonies by William Boyce, both characteristic of the eighteenth century English composers. They also presented the Romance in C of Sibelius, and, here, as in the rest of their playing, the treatment was lively and entertaining, if the tone quality was not always the best.

An Oboe Quintet (Op. 11) by Brian Boydell, with the composer supported by Carmel Lang, Hazel de Courcy, Maire Larchet and Betty Sullivan was another interesting contribution.

The third recital of the series will be given to-morrow night.

HELP FOR POOR

POVERTY SURVEY SUGGESTED

A STATE or municipal scheme to provide tubercular patients in poor circumstances with footwear and clothing, a reorganisation of the social system, a poverty survey of the country, and a type of social legislation which would enable each man to live according to his Christian dignity, were advocated by speakers at the 154th annual general meeting of the Sick and Indigent Roomkeepers Society, at Palace street, Dublin, yesterday.

The report for 1943 stated that during the year the society had assisted 5,525 deserving poor families (21,321 persons), at a cost of £4,727 — an increase on the previous year of £327 in the amount and 248 in the number of families.

Recently there had been a great increase in desertion cases by men who had gone to work in Great Britain, but the society had traced quite a number of the deserters.

There was a marked increase in the number of poor children suffering from tuberculosis, and a State or municipal scheme should be introduced whereby all tubercular cases in poor circumstances, especially children, would be provided with suitable footwear, etc. The vital question of the provision of accommodation in hospitals and sanatoria called for urgent attention.

SOCIAL SYSTEM

Moving the adoption of the report, the Lord Mayor (Alderman M. O'Sullivan, T.D.), who presided, said that notwithstanding the excellent work carried out by the society last year, the bitter fact remained that many cases could not receive the assistance deemed necessary because of its inability to meet in full all the demands made upon it.

The time for a recasting of their social code was overdue, he said.

Alderman P. S. Doyle, T.D., seconding the motion, said that the greatest contribution that could be made to societies of this kind would be a substantial reduction in the cost of living.

Proposing a motion, which was passed, appealing for increased public support of the Society, Alderman Alfred Byrne, T.D., said that one problem that had not yet been settled was the problem of providing clothing for poor children in the tenement quarters of the city. Too many people were depending on half crowns thrown at them by the Board of Assistance. There ought to be a poverty survey of the country, and a minimum provided on which poor people could live in comfort.

He mentioned that 8,000 children, who had been reported for non-attendance at school last year, could not be sent out in the cold barefooted and in rags.

Mr. Frank A. Lowe said that two things had struck him in the report: the relatively small amount which must of need be given to individual cases, and the fact that the Society seemed to be entirely voluntaryist. He suggested that if they wanted to raise money they should enlist the sympathies and the assistance of their daughters, their wives and their mothers.

If they could revive the Lord Mayor's show and have a flag day with it they could raise ten times the amount of money that they had been receiving in recent years.

The Rev. R. J. Kerr, Rector, St. George's Church, Dublin, who proposed a vote of thanks to the Lord Mayor, said that there was comfortable complacency in high places regarding poverty. There were resources in this country sufficient to remedy the social evils that existed, and all that was required was the will to use them.

The Rev. John J. Meagher, C.C., seconding the vote of thanks, said that they should have a type of social legislation which would enable each man to live according to his Christian dignity.
